FORGING COMMON GROUND

PASMUN TRIBUNE

2026 ISSUE TWO

Behind the Scenes

Written by: Jonah Chen Edited by: Isabella Zhu Layout by : An Cheng

The plastic bag bites into your fingers, its thin handles stretched tight as the heavy drinks drag downward with every step. It sways and sloshes at your side, wobbling like a restless pendulum that tugs insistently at your wrist.
You placed their drink on the table of C114 for admins, press, and chairs. Out of your own pocket, you paid for the drinks and reached for your phone to tell them “Drinks are here!”

Angel Wang is our Head of Administration for PASMUN 2026. With 4 years of experience by her side, Wang glides through her work with ease. However, it has not always been that effortless for her. When interviewed, Wang posits that one of the gravest burdens as an admin is to work under a demanding schedule. When things get busy, communication can become perplexing, so every day before 7:00 a.m. during the morning meeting, Wang delegates work and responsibilities to her team. “PASMUN taught me how to be a good leader and an even better communicator. I learned how to scaffold. Good leadership isn’t about handing out work — it’s about helping each person grow into their full potential.”, she says. This approach reflects the simple truth that drives Wang’s work ethic: she refuses to watch things fall apart.

Leo Wang, deputy head of PASMUN Admin 2026, inherits the same spirit. “He is actually very hardworking, more diligent than I was last year even”, says Angel Wang. When he is not asked for, Leo stays in the press room, reviewing the next task on his administrative agenda. We thank him for his dedication and attention to detail. In his free time, he strolls around and takes conference pictures for photographers who are busy editing photos. Leo’s attitude displays a reliable drive and we thank him again for that.

But the Admin team is not defined by Leo and Angel alone, the rest of the admins quietly worked to ensure delegates’ comfort despite early mornings and warm, stuffy rooms under the school’s strict green policy. They prepared small packaged snacks for delegates, adjusted the AC whenever possible, and even relocated GA3 after the first day to create a better environment.

These behind-the-scenes efforts highlight the admins’ dedication, attention to detail, and steady commitment to making the conference run smoothly—often without anyone noticing, but always with everyone’s experience in mind. Just like the drinks Angel bought out of her own pocket, the admins’ care ripples outward: a simple act of thoughtfulness becomes a foundation for the entire conference, reminding us that attention, empathy, and quiet diligence can shape the experience of everyone who walks through PASMUN’s doors.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

01 Behind the Scenes

02 Superlatives

03 Dress to Impress

04 Food Review

05 Photo Gallery

SUPERLATIVES

Most Likely to Become a Dictator

Harvey Hsieh (PAS)
delegate of Russia (SC)

Most Likely to Sell Government Secrets for a Benz

Shuma Endo (HDIS)
delegate of Russia (GA3)

Best speaker

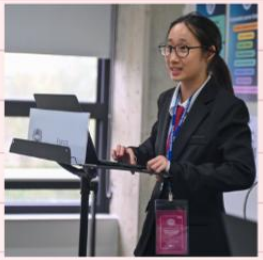

Zoe Cowie (KAS)
delegate of the UAE (GA1)

Most Likely to Flirt for Votes

Rita Lin (PAS)
delegate of Denmark (MSSC)

Most Likely to Gaslight the Chair

Chloe Chen (IBSH)
delegate of France (GA2)

Most Annoying

Jinjer Chen (PAS)
delegate of the UK (MSGA3)

Most Likely to Become a Model

Becky Chen (PAS)
delegate of Germany (ECOSOC)

Written By: Isabella
Edited By: Fei
Layout By: Luna

DRESS TO IMPRESS

Written by: Feifei He Edited by: Isabella Zhu Layout by: Kathy Chen

Emily Wu

On top, she has on a fitted, dark plum pinstriped button-up blouse. The vertical stripes elongate her silhouette while keeping the look structured and polished. The blouse feels sleek and slightly bold compared to a standard white shirt, giving her outfit more personality. She pairs it with classic black shorts, creating a clean contrast that keeps the focus on the tailored top. The hemline adds a youthful feel while still maintaining a professional appearance appropriate for the setting. On her feet, she's wearing black pointed-toe heels with delicate ankle straps. The pointed shape sharpens the overall look and enhances the formality, while the strap adds a subtle feminine detail.

Julie Hong

She's wearing a soft, academic-inspired outfit that blends polished and youthful elements. On top, she has on an oversized brown blazer with structured shoulders, giving a slightly tailored, preppy feel. Underneath, she's layered a light beige button-up dress with a subtle ruffled hem that peeks out below the blazer, adding softness and movement to the look. The neutral tones of brown and cream create a warm, cohesive palette. On her legs, she's wearing white knee-high socks, which give the outfit a classic school-uniform vibe. She pairs them with black leather loafers featuring a gold horseshoe detail, adding a touch of understated sophistication and tying the look together.

Katie Tsai

On top, she has layered a structured charcoal-grey blazer over a crisp white button-up shirt. The sharp collar and tailored lines of the blazer create a refined silhouette, while the smooth, minimal design keeps the look sleek and professional. The neutral pairing of grey and white feels classic and timeless. She pairs the blazer with tailored black shorts, which introduce a contemporary twist to traditional business wear. The cuffed hem adds structure and balance, keeping the outfit intentional rather than casual.

FOOD REVIEW

Written By: Kai Edited By: Jonah Layout By: Luna

Delegate Perspectives

The general vibe is that the food is pretty "meh"—not exactly a disaster, but definitely not winning any awards. It feels a bit like a repeat of last year, and when you stack it up against other conferences, it's clearly falling short. The plates look a little sad and taste a bit bland, which isn't exactly the fuel you want for a long day of debating.

"To be honest, I think it is the same food as the lunch served in last year's PASMUN. The quality is fine for me personally. But compared to other conferences, PASMUN's food is, no offense, but not as good."

"It is honestly below average. The mango juice is saving everything though. It is the best. The cheese stuff is quite good as well."

"The food is ok. Beside the food, the kitchen ladies are very nice. Very energetic."

"I guess the food is somewhat better than yesterday, but it's not that much better."

"I think the food is too plain. I mean for both taste and color."

That said, there are a couple of total lifesavers. A specific drink is basically the star of the show, and the cheese dishes are doing some heavy lifting to keep spirits up. Plus, the lunch ladies' high energy and friendly vibes genuinely redeem the whole lunch experience. It's getting slightly better as the days go by, but for now, it's definitely a "come for the debate, stay for the juice" kind of situation.

Photo Gallery

United States of America
China
United Kingdom

EDITOR IN CHIEF
Isabella Zhu

CO-EDITOR IN CHIEF
An Cheng

REPORTER
Feifei He Jonah Chen
Kaishin Hatanaka

LAYOUT
Kathy Chen
Luna Kim

PHOTOGRAPHERS
Matty Chen
Clark Lo

VIDEO GRAPHER
Kirby Ko